Continuation of 5. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: The amended claims will not be considered or entered because it was introduced after the Final rejection dated December 13, 2004. The claims previous to the Final rejection will only be considered and discussed in regards to its limitations and subject matter. Therefore claims 1-25 and 27-29 remains rejected in view of Tello and the following arguments was previously discussed in the Final office action:

Applicant argues that Tello fails to disclose a host wherein the functions of the host is to determine the identification number associated with the component/network switch through the communication with the non-volatile memory via the interface. However, claim 1 only claims "a host in communication with the identification module" and the guess register. Whatever Applicant argues the definition may be for a host, Applicant's host is broad and was not claimed in more details. Hence, the Examiner interprets to the broadest reasonable definition wherein a "host" is known in the art could be a main computer in a mainframe or the computer to which terminals are connected or a computer that provides access to other computers. Tello discloses a host is the computer with the security engine that gives access to other computer systems (col.14, lines 46-61 and col.17, lines 15-67). The bit strings are disclosed (col.15, lines 52-65 and col.16, lines 13-26). Tello discloses a "function enable output" by discussing a slave computer or subordinate computer that includes hashing and only the one identification code identifying the slave card and the ability to communicate with other computers (col.19, lines 12-25 and col.37, lines 27-42). The claimed language merely reads on aquiring a passcode where it does not read what Applicant argues as a passcode transmitted by the manufacturer and same goes for the argument concerning the hash numbers.

The Examiner is only required to read what is claimed in claims 1-25 and 27-29 and gives the claim language the broadest reasonable interpretation.
